Higher ed capital bond moves along Senate row

The bond issue would be backed by lottery proceeds and could get a full hearing by month's end.

OKLAHOMA CITY -- A $500 million higher education capital bond issue to be funded with lottery proceeds passed its first legislative test Wednesday.

The Senate appropriations education subcommittee moved along Senate Bill 745 by Senate President Pro Tem Cal Hobson, D-Lexington. Several amendments dealing with a funding stream failed.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mike Morgan, D-Stillwater, said the bill will be heard by the full committee on Feb. 16. If passed there, it could be heard on the Senate floor before the end of the month.

SB 745 was passed out of the subcommittee on a 13-0 vote after several attempts were made to amend the measure to provide a backup source of funding should lottery proceeds fall short.

"I don't think any of us today know for certain whether lottery funds will be sufficient or not," said Senate Republican Leader Glenn Coffee, R-Oklahoma City, who offered the amendments.

"We can all agree it is an important effort and we want to make sure it is done in the right way," Coffee said. "I think it would be unfortunate if we have to come back in future years and use large amounts of general revenue if for some unforeseen reason the lottery funds aren't sufficient."

One of Coffee's failed amendments would have made the state's share of revenues from new card games at tribal casinos the backup source for making bond debt payments if lottery funds are insufficient. His other amendment would have taken funds intended for the Legislature's support bureau as backup.

Gov. Brad Henry has called for a portion of the state's lottery proceeds to be used to fund the higher education bond issue, which includes about $65.4 million for Tulsa-area colleges and universities.

"Higher education has wrestled for too long with overcrowded facilities, crumbling research labs and obsolete equipment," Henry said.

The bond issue is a precursor for economic prosperity because of the incalculable impact it will have on research and development, the governor said as he urged quick action on the measure.

Henry will hold a press conference Thursday to explain how rising interest rates would impact the overall costs of the bond issue.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Todd Hiatt, R-Kellyville, said he is working on his own higher education bond proposal, but he has yet to announce details.

Hiatt supports a bond issue for higher education but wants to ensure the funding source is reliable.

Under the lottery proposal passed by state voters in November, some 45 percent of the proceeds will go to prizes and no less than 35 percent will go to education. No more than 20 percent will go to administration, said Paul Sund, a Henry spokesman.

Officials believe the lottery will generate up to $150 million a year for education.

Henry has selected five of the seven members for a state lottery commission but plans to announce all of the appointments at the same time, Sund said.

Sund said there were more than 50 unsolicited applications for the commission and the process has been handled just like other appointments. The law sets out the qualifications for members, he said.

"There was a large pool from which to chose," Sund said. "It is the same process as every other gubernatorial appointment."

Statement from Speaker Todd Hiatt: Regarding Higher Education Bond Issue

OKLAHOMA CITY (Feb. 10) -- Speaker of the Oklahoma House Todd Hiatt today issued the following statement in response to a press conference held by Governor Brad Henry:

"It's surprising that Governor Henry would suggest immediate approval of the higher education bond issue in the very first week of the legislative session. This bond issue will cost 500 million dollars. Oklahoma's hardworking families want us to make responsible decisions.

An individual Oklahoman considering whether to purchase a new home takes time to consider the options. They give it some thought.

They don't respond to pressures from salesmen telling them to "buy now."

We're taking the same responsible approach as a potential homeowner would – in this case considering a half billion dollars for the bond issue.

I feel strongly that our higher education institutions must be the best. And that means giving them the help and resources they need.

This bond issue will take a quarter of a century – an entire generation – to pay off. By the time the bonds are paid off, the young people who stood with Governor Henry today will be more than 40 years old.

Surely for three decades of 500 million dollars in debt for Oklahomans, we can take more than three days to consider all of the implications.

We must take the time to be responsible, and to do this right."
