Highlights This Week:

Oklahoma senator earns his college degree at last

By MICK HINTON

Tulsa World Capitol Bureau

5/22/2005

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Kenneth Corn said that shortly after he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1998, he was asked to speak to college students at Carl Albert Community College in Poteau.

Making the speech was awkward, he said, because some of the students had more education than he did.

But no more.

A week ago, Corn was handed a diploma from the University of Oklahoma for attaining a bachelor's degree in political science.

This past week, Corn gave addresses to two high school graduating classes, including at his alma mater, Howe High School. He told the students that they could acquire wealth and titles, but those could be taken away from them.

"But nobody can take away a college education," he said.

Corn asserts that getting a college degree is a bigger deal than winning the Senate race in his eastern Oklahoma district.

"The proudest moment in my life was when I got that degree," Corn said.

For more than a decade, the 29-year-old has been working to get a college degree.

At age 22, Corn was on the campaign trail running for a seat in the state House of Representatives. When elected, he was the youngest member of the House.

After serving two House terms, Corn was elected to the state Senate in 2002.

While serving in the Legislature at Oklahoma City, Corn said he would take a class or two at OU. In the fall when he was back in his legislative district, he would drive three days a week to OU, nearly a three-hour drive each way.

Through the years, he figured out how to take classes through the Internet; he picked up some at his community college in Poteau. He tried just about everything to pick up a course here and there.

In the summer of 1998, Corn went to China and earned some credits through the University of Peking.

Corn's voice rises in committee meetings and on the floor of the Senate when he talks about education. This term, he argued against a bill promoted by oil companies that would cut back on their tax assessments for equipment. Corn said giving them a tax break would take money away from the schools. The bill was defeated last week.

Neither of his parents graduated from high school. His father is now semi-retired after working several years for Wal-Mart.

Corn has said his family was poor.

"Both my parents always worked, trying to make ends meet. They were still poor and that's wrong," Corn said.

"My dad told me, 'I don't want you living from paycheck to paycheck.' "

At an early age, Corn took to politics. He remembers when former state Sen. Larry Dickerson came campaigning at his family's front door. Corn was only 9, but he asked Dickerson if he could help with his campaign.

A few years later, Corn was serving as a stand-in for the likes of politicians such as former governor and senator David Boren, when he couldn't make an appearance in eastern Oklahoma.

Others who encouraged him included former longtime lawmaker James Hamilton of Poteau, who is now retired.

During his first campaign, Corn traveled around the district in his 1987 tan-and-brown Dodge with 195,000 miles on it and no air conditioner.

After he was elected, Hamilton helped Corn get another vehicle, one that would get him to Oklahoma City and back.

Corn said Hamilton and many others keep asking him when he will get that college degree, but he won't have to dodge the bullet on that one anymore.

"I talked to Jim Hamilton the other day and told him I was about to graduate," Corn said.

Hamilton asked him: "Now when are you enrolling in law school? You need to go ahead and get that done."

Corn said he's going to have to think about that one for a while.
