Highlights This Week:

New state treasurer takes over June 1

By MICK HINTON

Tulsa World Capitol Bureau

5/4/2005

Taking Scott Meacham's place as finance director is the governor's first Hispanic appointee.

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Scott Meacham, the governor's chief negotiator and state finance director, will take over June 1 as Oklahoma's new treasurer, Gov. Brad Henry announced Tuesday.

Meacham will remain in Henry's Cabinet as secretary of finance and continue negotiating key issues such as workers compensation reform.

Meacham said he plans to run in 2006 for a full term as state treasurer. Treasurer Robert Butkin is leaving after more than 10 years to become dean of the University of Tulsa College of Law.

Henry also announced that Claudia San Pedro, deputy director of state finance, will take over Meacham's duties.

San Pedro is the first Hispanic person to be appointed to a high-profile position in Henry's administration, the governor said. She is married to Paul Sund, the governor's communications director. Henry said Meacham "has been a critically important player in my administration. He has taken on some of the most difficult issues that many, if not most, said could not be fixed."

Meacham was the chief architect of Henry's "lottery for education" initiative, which was approved by voters in November. He also negotiated successfully with American Indian tribes on gaming and tobacco compacts.

"It is truly a humbling experience and truly a great honor to be standing before you today, embarking on this new path in my life," Meacham said.

The new treasurer, however, reflected that Tuesday's event did not surpass his family's recent news regarding their 12-year-old daughter, Kady.

"One week ago today was even a more important day, when Kady got to finish her cancer treatment and was declared to be cancer-free," said Meacham, who, with his wife, Susan, has four children.

As state treasurer, Meacham will take a salary cut. He is paid $98,000 a year as finance director, but his treasurer's salary, set by state law, is $87,875.

Asked whether he would supplement the treasurer's salary, Henry said Meacham was aware of the difference when he took the job.

Meacham noted that he also had taken a pay cut when he joined the governor's administration.

"It wasn't quite as big as the one I had to take coming from banker, but yes, it will involve another pay cut," he said of taking the treasurer's job.

Meacham was chief executive officer of First National Bank & Trust of Elk City before joining the governor's administration. He had practiced law in Clinton before becoming a banker.

Henry and Meacham have known each other since law school, and the governor noted that he's lost only one election: when he ran for editor in chief of the law review at the University of Oklahoma, where he was beaten by one vote.

"The person who beat me was Scott Meacham," Henry said.

Meacham applauded Butkin for cleaning up the Treasurer's Office following Claudette Henry, whose administration was rocked with questionable dealings that cost the state millions of dollars.

"As a member of the financial community in this state, I can't tell you how important it is to have respect and integrity restored to that office," Meacham said.

Henry picks Meacham to fill treasurer's post

Scott Meacham is moving out of the state Office of Finance and Revenue and into the Oklahoma state treasurer's office. Meacham, who has served as director of the Office of State Finance and the governor's secretary of finance and revenue for the past two years, has been named the new state treasurer.

Meacham replaces Robert Butkin, who is resigning from the post to serve as dean of the University of Tulsa's College of Law. Butkin's last day as treasurer is May 31.

Claudia San Pedro, who has served as a budget director in the Office of State Finance since 2003, will replace Meacham as state director of finance, though Meacham will retain his cabinet position as the secretary of finance and revenue.

"I will continue to focus in exactly the same capacity for the governor as I have," said Meacham, who has served as the governor's point person in negotiations with the Legislature on the state budget, workers compensation, and other controversial topics. Meacham has also negotiated compacts with Indian tribes.

Though Meacham's primary focus will be running the treasurer's office, he will continue to serve as the governor's point person in his capacity as cabinet secretary, said Henry - who has known Meacham since they were in law school together at the University of Oklahoma.

"Robert Butkin sort of set the criteria and the standard that I looked for in his replacement - not an easy thing to do," said Gov. Brad Henry. "But I think that I have found the right person in Scott Meacham."

Butkin, who has served as treasurer since 1994, is credited with restoring integrity to the post in the eyes of the public, after years of scandals plagued the treasurer's office. In 1998, Butkin became the first state treasurer in Oklahoma history to be re-elected without opposition, a feat he accomplished again in 2002.

Meacham said Butkin is a hard act to follow.

"It's a pretty big task when the governor says to you, 'Scott, I want you to take over from the greatest state treasurer in our state's history,'" said Meacham. "It is my hope that I can build upon the many great things that Robert has started, and hopefully just leave the office a little better than I found it."

Shortly after Butkin announced his resignation in February, Meacham told reporters he was not seeking the position of treasurer. However, "after some coaxing and lengthy discussions, he has agreed to accept this position," Henry said Tuesday. Meacham thanked his family for their support in his decision to accept the position, noting that last week his young daughter completed cancer treatment and was declared cancer-free.

Meacham said he has committed himself to his new role and would run for the office when the position comes up for election next year.

The treasurer's job pays $87,875 under state law, which links the salary to the judicial system. Meacham currently makes $98,400.

Prior to his service as finance director, Meacham served in the private sector as chief executive officer of First National Bank and Trust of Elk City. He is a certified financial planner who holds a bachelor's degree in finance, a master's degree in business administration and a law degree from OU.

He and his wife Susan reside in Oklahoma City with their four children.

San Pedro has served as a budget director for the Office of State Finance since 2003. She is the first Hispanic Oklahoman to be appointed to such a high-profile position in the state, Henry's office announced. San Pedro holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Smith College in Massachusetts and an MBA from OU. She resides in Oklahoma City with her husband, Paul Sund, press secretary for Henry.
