- Bylaws Committee
 - No report
- Cooperative Collection Development and Resource Sharing Committee
 - Victoria Swinney reported that the committee is continuing to get more vendor responses in hopes of getting a better deal
 - Survey results indicated that:
 - the majority of people found the Oklahoma newspapers to be the most important, then national and regional newspapers were found to be the least important

- Expanded Instructional Support Committee
 - Jason Dupree reported that the committee is looking at the committee charge to see whether or not it needs revisions. Focus will be on open access, OPACs and distance learning
 - Jason encouraged member's to contact him if they knew employees on their campus who would like to serve on this committee
 - Stewart made note that any librarian can be appointed to an OCALD committee, so long as the committee chair is a library director

- OK-Share Committee
 - Karen Harmon stated that OKShare cards can be received by contacting Misti Estrada the Coordinator of Academic Affairs at OSRHE
 - Libraries will receive OKShare forms in June, they are to be filled out and returned

- Webpage Committee
 - The OCALD website has been updated, Suzanne asked that institutions please check the Member Directory for any information that needs to be changed

ODL Report – Susan McVey

- ODL would be glad to host OCALD at a future meeting
- No bills have made it out of committee
- Public buildings, state offices and a variety of other agency are currently not allowing open care of guns, but some bills have been introduced to reconsider this
- Not OSRHE, but the majority of state agencies will receive a 6.25% cut in their budgets
- State Department of Education, Higher Education, Career Tech will receive an increase in their budget
- Due to a teacher shortage bills to entice more people to work as teachers are being proposed
- Education Appropriations Subcommittee is asking their agencies to come up with budgets based on the following budget reductions: 2%, 5% and 7.5%
 - ODL is looking to reduce funds based on things that don't count toward their Maintenance of Effort, plan to use revolving fund money and cutting their library materials
 - ODL has received two waivers from IMLS due to a suddenly loss in unforeseen revenue
- Because all database licensing is paid with federal dollars, the reduction in state funding will not affect the database licensing
 - Database licensing would only be impacted if ODL was not able to get a waiver and thus did not get their federal funding

OSRHE Report – Blake Sonobe

- A $298,000,000 hole in the budget was expected for higher education, based on last year.
 - Last year this hole was filled by reserve funds
 - The governor said higher education would have a flat budget and extra funds would be put toward higher education, but this may not occur due to budget cuts
 - This year there is a $611,000,000 hole in the budget due to the drop of oil and gas along with the 2016 tax cut
 - To fill the hole as much as $125,000,000 will be taken out of the Rainy Day Fund and put toward revenues
 - How much of a cut, if any, higher education will take is unknown, but the cut will be distributed evenly across all institutions
- Following information was presented to the legislators concerning guns on campuses:
 - Currently in all public institutions the Presidents of the institutions has the authority to authorize individuals with the right to carry a concealed weapon
 - 32-34 request were made to Presidents and 13 were granted
 - Institutions are encouraged to post their guns on campus policies
- Oklahoma's Promise program is protected against budget cuts and there is encouragement to raise the limit of students who can access this program
- A committee that will present at an April summit meeting to provide faculty with readily accessible resources; i.e. open source materials, technologies that can enhance what we do today and looking at new affordable capabilities
 - OCALD was encouraged to identify what good resources professors could use for online courses

Library Printing Survey

- 19 institutions responded to the survey
- Results varied greatly by institution and a standard was not visible
- State institutions are not required to provide printing for the public, but is offered by the majority of the institutions that responded as a courtesy
- USAO has just started using a swipe card system for printing
- OU Tulsa uses the PaperCut Print Management System campus wide
- OU HSC changed from Go Print to PaperCut because everyone on campus was using PaperCut
 - PaperCut led to increased charges for the service and non-students have to create accounts
- PaperCut led to increased charges for UCO
- OU Tulsa began using PaperCut due to large amount of wasted paper by students because free printing was allowed, charging for printing using PaperCut led to a large decrease in printing and ability to determine exactly how much paper students are using
 - Installation cost and usage varies based on number of FTE
- Rose State allows students to print 50 pages per day, per student, 10 pages per day, per non-students using Print Manager Plus
 - Student can print additional pages in other departments
- Connors State saves money by defaulting printing to black and white

Shared Institutional Storage proposed by Steve Edscorn

- OCALD plans to:
 - Try to get Wynoma vanDuinkerken (Director of Joint Library Facility at Texas A&M University) to speak on the topic
 - Create an adhoc committee for this topic
 - OSU has started creating a shared institutional repository
 - OU is discussing this issue

Institutional Reports

- Paula Settoon – Tulsa Community College
 - Speakers needed for an Information Literacy Conference on Oct 24 & 25
 - Speakers will get a discount rate
 - Conference focused toward academic/school libraries
- UCO, OU & OSU are all celebrating their 125th year anniversaries
 - UCO will have various events
 - OSU will celebrate with events in September & October
 - OU will open their Galileo World Exhibit

Upcoming Meeting

- April 23rd – University of Oklahoma Norman
