COMPUTER SCIENCE COURSE CONTENT DESCRIPTIONS

CS 001 -- "Computer Literacy," a course with no prerequisites, is intended for both majors and non-majors. This course frequently involves training in spreadsheets, data bases, word-processing, ethics, vocabulary, Internet skills.

CS 002 -- A course in programming, taught in the Pascal language. This course would include basic control structures, files, input/output, and would conclude with a study of arrays.

CS 003 -- A course in programming, taught in the C language. This course would include basic control structures, files, input/output, and would conclude with a study of arrays.

CS 004 -- A course taught in programming, taught in an Object-Oriented language. This course would include basic control structures, files, input/output, and would conclude with a study of arrays.

CS 005 -- A course in programming, taught in the Pascal language. This course would include basic control structures, files, input/output, dynamic memory allocation, including an introduction to linked lists, stacks, queues, and binary.

CS 006 -- A course in programming, taught in the C language. This course would include basic control structures, files, input/output, dynamic memory allocation, including an introduction to linked lists, stacks, queues, and binary trees.

CS 007 -- A course in programming, taught in an Object-Oriented language. This course would include basic control structures, files, input/output, dynamic memory allocation, including an introduction to linked lists, stacks, queues, and binary trees.

CS 008 -- A first course in FORTRAN programming.

CS 009 -- A first course in COBOL programming.

CS 010 -- A first course in the BASIC language. (Note: This is not Visual BASIC.)

CS 011 -- A first course taught in Visual BASIC.

MUSIC COURSE CONTENT DESCRIPTIONS

INTRODUCTION TO MUSIC / MUSIC APPRECIATION -- Designed for the non-music major. Credit is not applicable to a music degree. A course in the exploration of music, covering important musical styles. Includes the opportunity for the student to listen to recordings and attend concerts. The course may include an introduction to the fundamentals of music.

FUNDAMENTALS OF MUSIC -- Designed for any major in the freshmen year, including those music majors who are deficient in theory. Introduction to the signs and symbols in the theory of music. Credit is not applicable to a music major.

MUSIC THEORY I --A required course for music majors. Open to non-music majors. A study of the basic materials of music through music analysis, composition and associated skills.

MUSIC THEORY II -- A required course for music majors. Open to non-music majors. A continuation of the concepts established in Music Theory I, covering traditional diatonic practice with an expansion of harmonic vocabulary.
